House hunt ends in purchase, at-home wedding

Information provided by Provence Homes

Scott and Robin Severson spent more than a year looking for a spacious, quality-built home in which they could live together and raise a family.

In December, the Seversons moved into a Provence Home in the Fountain Hills new-home community, and said the end result was worth the wait.

"The quality is so much higher than any of the other homes we looked at," Robin Severson said. "Nothing compared to the Provence home we found in Fountain Hills."

After becoming engaged in March, the couple began wedding preparations but soon realized the perfect venue was close to home — literally.

"We decided right away that there was no other place we would rather make our vows than in our beautiful home," Robin Severson said.

The Seversons were married Aug. 12 and said guests raved about their Provence home.

"Everyone thought our home was so beautiful and thought it was the perfect place for our wedding," Robin Severson said.

"Even our minister thought it was wonderful. The quality and stylishness is a testament to Provence Homes' owner John Lober and the care and craftsmanship he puts into each home. We're absolutely thrilled with our choice and would recommend Provence Homes to anyone."

Provence Homes' signature European-style homes are available in upper-scale communities throughout the Northland, including The National, where Lober offers homes priced up to $1.6 million. Prospective homeowners can select from a library of distinctive floor plans and Lober builds in a variety of price ranges from the mid-$200,000s.

Builder John Lober of Provence Homes has European-style homes in a variety of communities throughout Kansas City, including The National. Lober builds in a variety of price ranges and styles.

In addition, Lober's passion to help local causes has earned him a reputation as one of Kansas City's most philanthropic builders. Since his recent involvement in FuzzyFotos KC to help raise money for No More Homeless Pets KC and the Kansas City Free Health Clinic, Lober has turned his attention to promoting the 2006 Building Awareness Designer Show Home and its ribbon-cutting, to be held Sept. 8.

2006 marks the fourth year for this event, which will showcase a Designer Show Home in Loch Lloyd, built by Timberstone Development Inc. to raise awareness and give hope to anyone touched by cancer. Lober's Provence Homes built show homes for the first two years of the event and Lober continues to support the efforts of all builders involved with the Touched by Cancer Foundation. Anyone wishing to contact John Lober can call (816) 520-0105, and anyone newly diagnosed with cancer can receive a complimentary copy of Bigger than Pink, a book written by Lober's wife, Lori, detailing her journey with cancer. For more information, contact the Touched By Cancer Foundation at (816) 505-0400.
